Ten people produce enough sewage to create a million barrels of toxic waste. Where does it all end up? How much of it will be cycled back into their lives? A never ending cycle of crap that perpetuates itself. Compost is made for garden use as bacteria break down bio-mass. All the people were watching the clock when they took their showers. They took out their stopwatches and measured the time. They had competitions to see who could take the shortest shower and still get clean. It was a dark and stormy night. It was a stormy and dark night. It was a lovely dark and stormy night. A night so dark and lovely. Everything blurs/repeats. There is repetition with some changes but not really. It's all the same. Community action relies on individuals who organize events that lead to long term change. I was a prisoner alone in a dark room. I endured hours of Chinese water torture or was it water boarding or was it water skiing? Chicago Detroit Berlin If we organize well our drain system we can have a clean city. My friends don't want to get old. They want to have many more good days on earth with lots of water and big storms. The kind of storm when the lightning strikes, the sky lights up, the thunder roars and water rushes. A lot of Art is stupid. Especially if it's too [crossed out] Global warming is not staged. [picture of a mustache] Shady. Change relies on the actions of individuals. But what motivates and drives the individual? Environment, peers, exposure? what does and individual rely on? I think it would be great if we could compost all the paper money in the world. We could use worms to breakdown the very thing that has caused such inequality. Rats use the by products of trash found in the streets and gutters frequented by homeless people. Chicago has developed a system to conserve water and process it to a clean state of drinkability. I love people and cats. Dogs are okay too, but cars are more self-sufficient. For some reason, portable homeless is not sitting in the toilets, but on it... Toilets -- place to sit on...
